Funderburk Resigns, Chancellor System Scrapped, Bailey Interim President

Following the rapid deterioration of his support in February, President Hanly Funderburk submitted a letter of resignation to the Auburn Board of Trustees at a meeting called by Gov. George C. Wallace in his office on February 26. If the board "feels I should resign as President," said the letter, "I will do so." The board unanimously accepted Dr. Funderburk's resignation, effective March 1, on a motion by the most recently-named trustee, Robert E. Lowder of Montgomery. It also dissolved the Auburn University System (which it had created at its previous meeting on January 7 in an attempt to quiet the controversy) and named Dr. Wilford S. Bailey '42, a member of the Auburn faculty for most of the past forty years, as interim president. (See related story on the cover.)

Dr. Funderburk stepped down after a month in which the Auburn woes had received increasing national and regional publicity. Time magazine and the nationwide newspaper USA Today had both sent reporters to cover the story. Sixty Minutes was considering a probe into the political involvement in the Auburn administration, and the State Legislature was about to get involved if the situation was not settled in a month. Every major newspaper in the state repeatedly had questioned why Dr. Funderburk continued to stay on while Auburn was being damaged further. Students joined faculty (more than 70 percent of whom had voted no confidence in the president's leadership in November) in asking for Dr. Funderburk's resignation.

Gov. Wallace, who was in the hospital and not present for the Trustees' meeting, named a search committee for a new Auburn president through a memo read to the board by Elvin Stanton. The governor named Robert E. Lowder chairman of the search committee and appointed John Denson, Michael McCartney, Henry Steagall, James Tatum, and Wayne Teague to serve with him. Gov. Wallace further asked that the president of the Auburn faculty, the president of the Auburn Student Government Association, and the president of the Auburn Alumni Association each appoint three members to serve as an advisory group to the trustees. Mr. Lowder later said that the search committee would meet as soon as the advisory group members had been appointed, which he expected to be by the end of the first week in March.

Dr. Funderburk, who will continue to draw his present $75,000 salary through October 30, 1985, has been named to the new position of Director of Governmental and Community Relations at AUM. He will have a car and operating expenses as well as an office and secretary provided by the university. The Trustees also gave him 90 days to move from the President's Home and six months of sabbatical leave with pay.

Repeatedly in the past four months, Dr. Funderburk, strongly supported by many agriculture organizations and the Alabama Farm Bureau in particular, had stressed that he would not resign. The Trustees created the Auburn System in January in an attempt to solve the controversy by allowing Dr. Funderburk to retain the presidency but have someone else in charge of the Auburn campus. However, instead of helping the situation, that obvious compromise made it worse when the system proved unpopular with alumni and students. Opponents of the system criticized not only the demotion of Auburn University to a branch status and the creation of an expensive new administrative layer at a university already in financial straits, but also the evident lack of planning for the operation of the system on the part of the trustees. Some trustees who had voted for the system compromise became disillusioned when a new organizational plan drawn up by Dr. Funderburk indicated that a chancellor would have no real authority and then Dr. Funderburk's efforts to secure an interim chancellor on his terms failed.

As the days passed increasing numbers of Auburn faculty began to accept positions at other universities and tell the press why they were doing so. Heads of three departments — Math, History, and Political Science — resigned, saying they could not continue in their positions because they could not in good conscience encourage their faculty to stay at Auburn nor could they encourage other faculty to come here. As their professors and department heads began resigning, students became concerned. The Plainsman called for Dr. Funderburk's resignation "for the good of Auburn University." A telephone poll of the student body indicated a majority of the Auburn students believed that Dr. Funderburk's resignation was the only solution.

On February 14, the Auburn Student Senate voted 33-1 to ask the president to resign. A year earlier they had supported the president. Two days later on February 16 the Alumni Association Board of Directors asked the Trustees to reconsider the Auburn University System plan, to meet every two weeks until they had solved the

Lowder, Tatum New Trustees

Gov. George C. Wallace has appointed Huntsville attorney James T. Tatum, Jr., '53 and Montgomery businessman Robert Lowder '64 to the Auburn Board of Trustees. Mr. Tatum fills the seat previously occupied by Robert Harris, a Decatur attorney and former Wallace floor-leader, who had opposed President Hanly Funderburk's appointment and the creation of the Auburn University System. Mr. Lowder fills the seat formerly held by Charles Smith, also of Montgomery.

Mr. Tatum graduated from Auburn in mechanical engineering before receiving a law degree from the University of Alabama nine years later. He is a partner in the firm of Berry, Ables, Tatum, Little & Baxter. Active with a number of service organizations in the Huntsville area, he had held several offices in the Huntsville-Madison County Bar Association and currently serves on the board of directors of the Madison County Auburn Club.

Mr. Tatum's father, James, Sr., graduated from Auburn in 1928. His son William graduated in 1976 and daughter Ann Terese Tatum Estes attended Auburn before receiving a nursing degree from UAB. His son Jamie is a senior in the School of Business.

Mr. Lowder graduated from Auburn in business administration and received the Delta Sigma Phi scholastic key as the outstanding graduate in his curriculum as well as the Alabama Bankers Association Award as the outstanding student in finance. He is chief executive officer of Colonial Mortgage Co. and is chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Colonial Bancgroup, Inc. He owns radio station WLWI in Montgomery, which originates Auburn football and basketball broadcasts, and was on the search committee which hired football coach Pat Dye.

A former president of the Auburn Alumni Association, he is an ex-officio member of its Board of Directors. Mr. Lowder and his brothers, Tom and James '72, have honored their father, Ed Lowder '34, with the support of Lowder Professorships in the School of Business. Mr. Lowder is married to Martha Wood '65.

The two members have taken their seats on the board and their appointments will be up for confirmation by the Alabama Senate along with that of R. C. (Red) Bamberg '40 of Uniontown who was reappointed to the board in January.

Gifts to Auburn In 1982 Total $3,871,402.58

Beginning on Page 5 and continuing through the remaining pages of the March Alumnews are the names of contributors to Auburn University through the Auburn Generations Fund and the Auburn Annual Giving Program during 1982. (No pledges to the Generations Fund are included in these totals). The total amount of money given to Auburn reached $3,871,402.58.

The total gifts to Auburn number 5,020 and include 204 matching company gifts (Continued on p. 2) as well as 180 gifts outright from companies. Auburn alumni made 3,650 of the total gifts and Auburn friends another 986.

At intervals in the listing are special lists of members of various Clubs whose contributions were significantly large to receive special attention: The President's Club ($1,000 or more), the Deans' Club ($500-$999), the Pacesetters' Club ($300-$499), and the Century Club ($100-$299).

The 35 alumni in the President's Club gave $1,289,643, and the 99 friends in that club made gifts totalling $434,187.39.

Deans' Club alumni numbered 129, with contributions of $59,985, and friends reached 35 with gifts of $19,165.

Pacesetter Club Members totalled 108 alumni ($30,441) and 37 friends ($12,166).

Alumni Century Club members reached 1,094 with $131,280 in gifts, while the 241 Century Club friends totalled $33,825.

problem (the board had not met since January 7), and to take whatever steps were necessary to end the controversy. At each of its preceding meetings since the faculty had first failed to vote confidence in the president in February 1982, the Alumni Board had expressed its confidence in President Funderburk's leadership.

That same day President Emeritus Harry Philpott ended his silence on the matter and appeared before the Alumni Board of Directors, telling reporters after the meeting that the situation had gotten to such a point that he felt he had to do so. Dr. Philpott expressed concern about Auburn's loss of support for its academic programs if the situation continued. He also pointed out the risk to Auburn's accreditation status if the turmoil was still going on when the accreditation team from the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges came to campus in April.

In the meantime, Auburn students were busy collecting signatures on petition to ask for Dr. Funderburk's resignation.

On February 19, officers of the faculty met with several members of the Board of Trustees, including the new members Robert Lowder and James Tatum, for a long discussion. The following Wednesday, February 23, a student group turned in a petition of 2404 signatures of Auburn students to Gov. George Wallace and to President Hanly Funderburk asking for his resignation. In the meantime, the Alabama Legislature was asking for an investigation into the Auburn situation.

On Friday, February 25, Gov. George Wallace announced that he had called a meeting of the board in his office for 11 o'clock on Saturday morning. That morning, after a two-hour executive session in the office of Trustee and State Finance Director Henry Steagall, the board moved to the Governor's Office for the public meeting, from which Dr. Funderburk was absent. The board went through its agenda swiftly and then introduced Dr. Wilford Bailey as interim president. A statement issued by Dr. Funderburk charged that academic freedom at Auburn had been "misused and abused" but called for "faculty, students, Trustees, alumni and friends to join hands in giving 100 percent support to whomever the new president might be."

CENTENNIAL MARKER—To commemorate a century of service by the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station, a centennial marker was dedicated during ceremonies February 23 at the Main Station headquarters in Auburn. The celebration also included a birthday party-luncheon, a joint resolution by the State Senate and House commending the Experiment Station's accomplishments, and a lecture by Dr. Orville Bentley, U. S. assistant secretary of agriculture for science and education. Seen from left at the unveiling are Drs. Gale A. Buchanan, Experiment Station dean and director, E. V. Smith and R. Dennis Rouse, former deans and directors, and Stanley P. Wilson, vice president for agriculture, home economics, and veterinary medicine. Some 400 Auburn faculty students, and friends attended the centennial observance.

The new interim president, who graduated from Auburn in veterinary medicine, looked to the future in his brief statement to the press, saying, in part, "Auburn University has in recent months been through some difficult times and has faced some serious issues. From this moment, however, I ask students, faculty, staff, alumni and all citizens of Alabama to help put these difficulties behind us and work to build a better and stronger institution. This is not to suggest that we forget the past altogether, for it is of utmost importance that we learn from whatever mistakes have been made in order that they not be repeated. We must profit by these experiences, but our focus must be on the future."

Summer Music, Theatre Camps Planned for High School Students

Two programs in music and theatre have been planned for high school students at Auburn this summer. From June 19 through July 10, two camps will be offered through the School of Architecture and Fine Arts and the School of Education. Instrumentalists will have the opportunity to enroll in the High School Solo and Ensemble Camp and vocalists, dancers, actors, and persons interested in the technical elements of the theatre may enroll in the Summer Youth Musical Theatre.

The Solo and Ensemble Camp will involve the students in intensive study on their instrument with one of Auburn University's performance teachers. Emphasis will be on improving technical proficiency, learning new literature, developing musical expression, and providing opportunities for public performance. Small ensembles will be organized to learn and perform literature from the standard chamber music repertoire. Also, students will be able to increase other dimensions of their musicianship through classes in music theory, music literature, accompanying, composition, improvisation, and electronic and experimental music. Some players may also choose to perform in the orchestra for the production presented by the Summer Youth Musical Theatre.

The Summer Youth Musical Theatre will involve the production and public performance of the Broadway musical Oklahoma! High school students will be cast in all performance roles. They will also be involved in the technical aspects of scenery, costumes, lighting, and makeup. They will also receive instruction in acting, stage movement, blocking, singing, and dancing. Instruction will be given by Auburn University's faculty in music and theatre, which represents many years of professional experience in musical theatre production.

Enrollments for both camps will be limited with preference given to those applicants who have demonstrated achievement in music, theatre, or dance. The application deadline for the Solo and Ensemble Camp is May 15. Applications for the Musical Theatre Camp must be received by April 15. Application forms and additional information can be received by writing: Missy Kuykendall, Coordinator, 100 Mell Hall, Auburn University, Alabama 36849.

Foreign Language & Alabama Trade Conference to be Held April 29-30

On April 29 and 30 language teachers, businessmen, and government officials will be gathering in Auburn for a conference on foreign language and Alabama trade. The brainchild of Dr. Samia Spencer of Auburn's Department of Foreign Languages, the conference is already getting attention from several states, although the programs have not officially been mailed. For once, says Dr. Spencer, project director for the conference, "Alabama's leading the way."

Sponsored by the Committee on the Humanities in Alabama and the Auburn University Foreign Language Department, the conference is officially called "Foreign Languages and International Trade for a Better Alabama." The keynote speaker will be the Congressman Paul Simon of Illinois, an exponent of improving language teaching in the U.S.

Speakers will also include Winton M. Blount of Montgomery, president and chairman of the Blount Company; Dennis Lockhart, vice president and regional director of Citicorp of Atlanta; Dr. S. Frederick Starr, president designate of Oberlin University; and Dr. Rose Lee Hayden, executive director of the National Council on Foreign Languages and International Studies in New York City.

Addressing various topics relating to Alabama and foreign trade will be Dr. Francois Melese of the Auburn Economics Department; Dr. Robert L. Lager, director of the Center for International Trade and Commerce in Mobile; Robert M. Hope, director of the Alabama State Docks; and Gayle Shelton, Jr., director of international trade administration with the U.S. Department of Commerce in Birmingham.

Involved in discussions of the teaching of languages with an outlook toward their being used in business and trade will be a number of Auburn alumni including Nan H. Ferguson of Springwood School in Lanett; Dianne Strickland '64, of the Richardson Independent School District, Texas; Louise Upshaw-McClenny, sales manager of the Four Seasons Hotel in Houston, Tex.; Dawn M. Crawford '75, staff treasury analyst, International Group, Burroughs Corp. in Detroit; Cindy Beck '80, Department of Defense, Washington, D.C.; Craig Briggs '80, assistant account executive of Burton-Campbell, Inc., of Atlanta; Nancy Doke, marketing representative with Armstrong World Industries in Coral Gables, Fla.; Lexie Palmer, associate financial analyst with Foreign Credit Insurance Association in Atlanta; and Debbie Street '78, marketing representative with Miami Free Zone.

Auburn faculty involved in the conference in addition to Dr. Spencer and Dr. Melese include Dr. Gregory Jeane of the Department of Geography; Dr. E. Wayne Shell '52, head of the Department of Fisheries and Allied Aquaculture; Dr. James L. Stallings, Agricultural Economics; and Dr. Daniel E. Rivas, Dr. Thomas Warbington, Dr. J. Richard Law, Prof. Alex Posniak, Dr. Jose Antonio Madrigal, and Dr. Robert M. Henkels, all of the Foreign Language Department.

Businesses are invited not only to send representatives to the conference, but to have a display booth. Firms can reserve booth space as long as it is available. For information about attending the conference or reserving space for a display (space will be allocated on a first-come, first-serve basis) contact Dr. Samia Spencer, Department of Foreign Languages (FL/CHA), Auburn University, AL 36849.

Memorial Scholarship Established to Honor Mary George Lamar

The Mary George Lamar Memorial Scholarship Fund has been established at Auburn in recognition and appreciation for Prof. Lamar's 40 years of service to Auburn University, to her students in Office Administration, and to countless others whose lives she touched and influenced. In addition to her many professional activities, Prof. Lamar, an ardent supporter of Auburn athletics, will be remembered for her involvement and leadership in the Sphinx chapter of Mortar Board, the Kappa Delta sorority, the University Faculty Club, and the Auburn Alumni Association.

An alumnus of the class of 1933, Miss Lamar retired as Associate Professor Emerita in Management in 1974. Until a few months before her death in 1981, she was involved in campus and community activities "with the same enthusiasm, fervor, and instinctive compassion for others that had characterized her 40 years of dedication to Auburn University."

The scholarship which has been established to honor the memory of Prof. Lamar will be a perpetual tribute to her and will be awarded to an outstanding and deserving student in Office Administration, a program in Vocational and Adult Education.

The scholarship committee is composed of Evelyn Bond, assistant professor, Office Administration; George Horton, dean of the School of Business; Boyd Scebra, associate dean of School of Education; and Mary Street, instructor of Office Administration.

Evelyn Bond, committee chairman, says that contributions, which are tax deductible, may be made to the Auburn University Foundation and designated for the Mary George Lamar Memorial Scholarship Fund. The mailing address is 113 Foy Union, Auburn University, AL 36849.

Auburn Again Joins State Elderhostel Yearly Program

Again this year, Auburn will be one of the colleges in Alabama to participate in the Elderhostel program. A unique educational program for persons 60 or older, Elderhostel combines travel and courses at universities across the U.S., Canada, Great Britain, and Scandinavia. The low-cost programs provide a week of courses on campus at participating colleges in every state and in the countries listed above. Dates for the programs in Alabama this spring are listed below. For more information, contact the person listed at each school or Mary Burkhart, State Director, Alabama Elderhostel, 100 Mell Hall, Auburn University, Ala. 36849. (Telephone: (205) 826-5101).

Auburn Hockey Team Wins Southern Collegiate Ice Hockey Championship

Auburn's club ice hockey team defeated Georgia State University 12-5 and the University of Tennessee 4-3 in a hard fought overtime match in late February to win the SCHA league championship tournament. The icetigers won the regular season championship by defeating Georgia State 14-0 and 10-3 in Birmingham the previous weekend, finishing with a 14-1-1 league record. The championship tournament was held in the Chattanooga Choo Choo Complex. Freshman wing Bob Cowles scored a three-goal hat trick for Auburn including the winning goal in overtime in the championship game against Tennessee and was named winner of the Tom Bebe Award for the tournament's Most Valuable Player. (Mr. Bebe is chairman of the board of Delta Airlines.) Auburn Coach Tom Steinfatt and Captain John Nordness accepted the beautiful Cliff Wallace Cup in the awards ceremony following the victory over Tennessee from League Commissioner Chick Waddell.

As the Alumnews goes to press the team faces defending national champion UAH and Arizona State in the first two rounds of the US National Collegiate Club Championship Tournament. The final round will be held Saturday March 5 in the Huntsville Civic Center. A capacity crowd of 6,700 is expected for each of the games.

Auburn Coach Tom Steinfatt appealed to several alumni clubs for financial support earlier in the year but only a few donations have been received. If any clubs or individuals would like to support the sixth-ranked collegiate club ice hockey team in the country they can mail their tax deductible contributions to Coach Tom Steinfatt, Box 1333, Auburn, AL 36830.

The hockey team receives no financial support from the university and the team members must either earn all of the cost of the team or contribute it themselves. On May 9 at 6:30 p.m., PM Magazine will televise a special segment on Auburn Hockey, giving Auburn national coverage.

Anniston Hosts State History and Heritage Festival April 8, 9

Auburn's participation in the Alabama History and Heritage Festival will continue in April with the Northeast Alabama festival to be held in Anniston on April 8 and 9. Dr. Wayne Flynt of the Auburn History Department, who has a strong interest in the Anniston area and in the history of the working man in Alabama, will be Auburn's main connection with the festival.

The festival which will begin on Friday at 6 will include crafts of the area as well as history and humanities events. Friday's events include a discussion by John Kelly of the State board of the Endowment for the Arts on Tom Sims and his "Ohatsee USA" column which distributed wisdom from the forks of the creek.

Saturday's programs will include discussions on the history of rural Calhoun County and the Military and Calhoun County.

Saturday afternoon Anniston Author Elise Sanguinetti will talk about literature and Josephine Ayers will discuss Anniston's famous Alabama Shakespeare Festival in a session to be chaired by Dr. Bert Hitchcock '63, head of the Auburn English Department.

Final Statement By Hanly Funderburk

As President of Auburn University my total interest has been the advancement of this fine institution of higher learning.

I love Auburn, which is my alma mater, and I care deeply what happens to this institution.

I have done my best to accomplish what the Board asked me to do when I assumed the presidency three years ago. The three things that the Board considered most pressing were improvement of the financial situation, the lack of private financial support, and the condition of the athletic program. Even though we have had limited resources, the University is now in sound financial condition with a management system in place to help insure that it will not revert to the previous critical condition. This was accomplished without massive layoff of faculty or reduction in salary. In fact, salaries were increased an average of 23.5 percent during the three year period.

We established a realistic goal of $62 million to be raised from private sources through our Generations Fund Drive. Some 70 percent, or $42 million, of the goal has been reached. Quality educational programs can not be attained without proper financial supports.

The athletic program, which was having financial problems as well as having the football program on probation, is now in sound financial condition and is nearing national prominence.

In addition, an active multimillion dollar construction program is underway, and positive steps have been taken toward regaining full accreditation in Veterinary Medicine and Engineering.

It should be noted that these accomplishments were made during the most difficult financial period we have had in the last fifty years. We could have accomplished even more with the full support of all faculty and administrators.

Every action that I have taken as President has been to advance and to improve Auburn University. However, some of these well intended actions were unfavorably received, creating perceived problems. For months I have worked very hard to find equitable and positive solutions to these problems. As things have turned out, the problems have not been resolved but have increased in intensity.

A dark cloud has been cast over day to day operations, creating unfavorable publicity for the University. Under the present conditions, those who eventually will suffer the most are not the members of the faculty or the administrative officers, but the students who come here for a quality education. They are my deepest concern.

Truth is supposed to be paramount in a university setting, but in recent months mockery has been made of truth by some Auburn University faculty, and a propaganda campaign has been waged against the true facts. For those who are entrusted with the education of young people, this is an intolerable situation.

We have seen academic freedom abused and misused. Many students have reported to me that faculty have continuously devoted class time to pressuring them into becoming involved in the unrest created by some faculty. The unrest at Auburn started with the presidential selection process and has resulted in a continuous three-year propaganda war which has failed to yield any significant issues and therefore no significant charges.

I place Auburn University, its student body and its far-reaching educational mission above personal considerations. Because my presence as President appears to be an issue with certain aroused members of our faculty in a worsening situation, I am resigning as President of Auburn University effective March 1, 1983.

I hope this act will remove totally all storm clouds so that Auburn University can return to normalcy and get on with its educational mission. To me, what happens to Auburn and to its students is far more important than my presence as President.

It is regrettable that we did not have time to complete many worthwhile projects which were initiated.

I urge the faculty, students, Trustees, alumni and friends to join hands in giving 100 percent support to whomever the new president might be; and to devote all efforts to what is best for Auburn University, and to help provide the very best education possible for all its students.

It has been a challenging three years, and I deeply appreciate the help and support I have received from so many dedicated members of the Auburn family.

Here and There—

Spring Comes Early

By Jerry Roden, Jr. '46

Auburn University's long tribulation has ended. Less than one full week after Dr. Wilford S. Bailey's advent as interim president, an almost miraculous transformation has occurred on campus: People smile again, they speak of our University's future with confidence, they go about the business of the University with renewed determination and vigor, and spring flowers are blossoming all around.

Much of the credit for this remarkable change must go to Dr. Bailey himself: First, according to many reliable accounts, he refused to become a pawn in the proposed new chancellorship system—an obviously well-intended but poorly conceived political patchwork scheme. Second, upon the resignation of Dr. Hanly Funderburk as president and the discarding of the chancellorship plan, he agreed to accept the interim presidency—a position that he had not sought and obviously did not desire—because he believed that he "could help restore stability to Auburn University."

Third, in his first public utterance after accepting his new position, he set exactly the right tone: He noted that we cannot forget what happened, that we must remember so that it never will happen again, and he employed the word tragedy to define clearly the disaster that almost befell Auburn University. He spoke without qualification of his friendship with and respect and affection for Dr. Hanly Funderburk. But then he emphasized the immediate need to concentrate on the future.

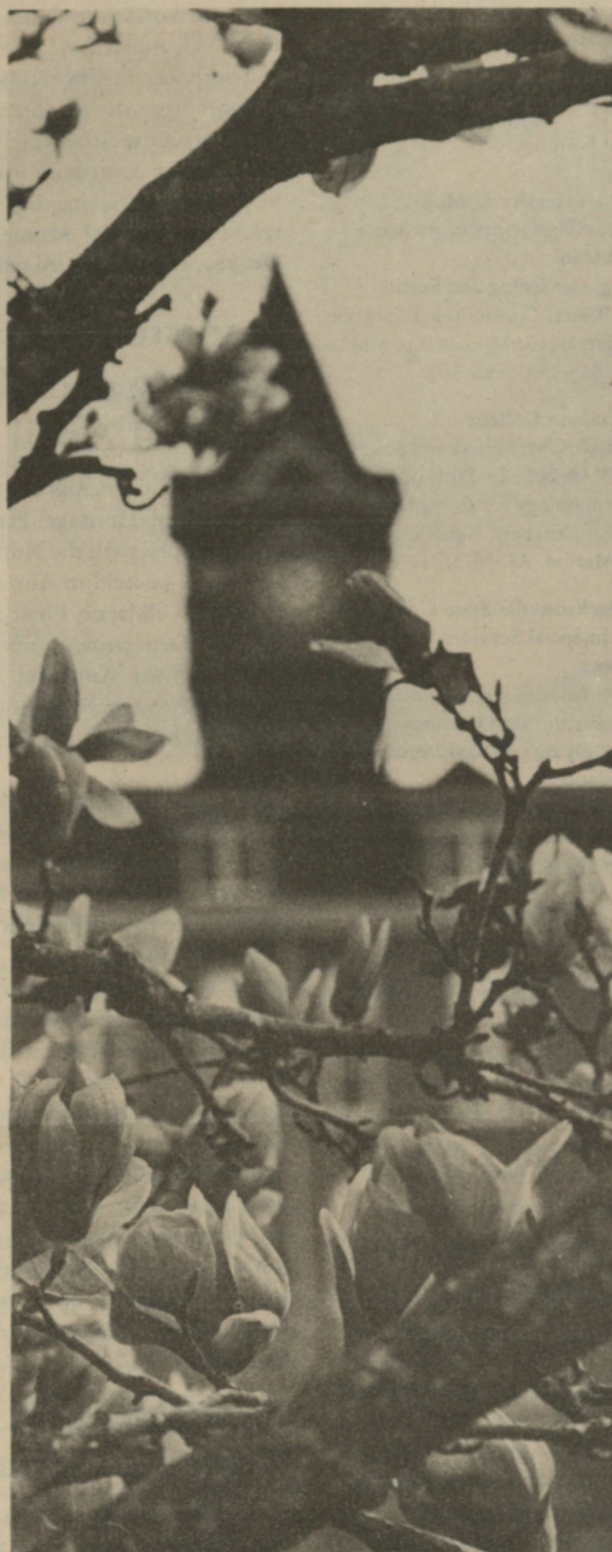

And finally, upon March 1, the day he officially assumed office, Dr. Bailey issued a forceful memorandum to faculty and staff: First, he called upon faculty and staff members for "their best help and support because we cannot move forward unless we are together and share a common vision of the future." Next, he asked a joining together "in reaffirmation of our foremost responsibility: Providing the best possible education for our students."

He further requested a renewed commitment "to a vigorous pursuit of the scholarly goals of the University," and affirmed the essentiality of demonstrating "to the many constituencies whom we serve that we are united in our determination to make Auburn a university of unquestioned academic distinction."

Noting "the unsettled conditions of the recent past," Dr. Bailey requested that "we all... do our best to develop and maintain an atmosphere of true professionalism within the University community." And then added: "We must conduct our affairs with trust, and with the kind of tolerance and respect for each other which has historically marked these relationships at Auburn."

And he concluded: "Our greatest strength lies in our human resources: students, alumni, and you, our faculty and staff. I look forward to sharing with all of you in these next several months the confidence I feel about our University's future."

Undoubtedly, Dr. Bailey's effective rhetoric has been enhanced by a sense of relief that the long struggle of embattled factions has ended. In addition, his past successful service in various administrative capacities, including the top vice presidency of Auburn University, lend credibility to his words. Yet, the real strength of his words and deeds comes from a deeper source—from the heart and mind of a man who first earned distinction as a teacher and a scientist and who has never forgotten that a great university consists above everything else in a faculty devoted to effective teaching and to the disciplined scholarship essential for such teaching and for fulfilling the other obligations of the University.

The Board of Trustees at last performed nobly in persuading Dr. Bailey to assume the interim presidency. If it supports him fully in the course he has set forth to faculty and staff, the necessary healing process at Auburn University will continue at the present almost miraculous pace. And, if in due course it chooses as his successor one as articulate and as well versed as he in the essential nature of a great university, we can all look forward to the future of Auburn University not only with confidence but with a pride which will increase with the passing months and years.

Behind the Headlines—

Where is Everything?

By Kaye Lovvorn '64

Billy Jack Jones of the University Printing Service art department casts a final questioning eye over each page of The Alumnews before it is irrevocably turned into a negative, and frequently he spots gremlins which have escaped our proofreading pens. He looked at the first five pages of this issue to be correct (we hope) and said, "This is the singularly most dull issue of The Alumnews I've ever seen. At least you usually break up this list of names with a few pictures."

Now Bill's view of the issue isn't prejudiced because his own name didn't see type; he's listed. But we thought his criticism deserved an explanation and our other readers might like one, too.

We must confess we didn't plan the issue to be almost all names and James (O. B.) Stanfield can prove it. He shot all those pictures we meant to use (and will be using next issue). Boo McQueen, who gets us the list of contributors each year, just kept on bringing us names. Thus, when we started layout the names went on and on. Now, we aren't complaining, mind you—the more names, the more gifts to Auburn—but we did want to add a 'thank you' on behalf of the University and explain why this isn't a normal Alumnews issue.

In April we promise a regular issue, including all those stories, pictures, alumnalities, etc., that we planned for this one and didn't have space for in our 32 pages.

Across the page, Jerry Roden, Jr., '46 talks about what many of us in Auburn feel these days as we look to our beloved University's future with renewed optimism. Spring indeed has come to Auburn. The row of Japanese magnolias in front of Draughon Library is in full flower. The Bradford pears down the concourse by Haley Center and the trio of them outside the Alumnews office window are white with blossoms. An open window lets in the sound of work on the new Electrical Engineering building, funded by a bond issue in 1978 and about to become a useful part of the Auburn campus in a few months.

And spring in Auburn, of course, even if it's a couple of days' respite in the midst of February cold, always brings a blossoming of bodies and diets as Auburn coeds—and occasionally their boyfriends—start the countdown on suntans and figures for the spring break.

STUDENT HONOR—Mary Beth Hayes recently received the Southeastern Branch Student Award of the Entomological Society of America. The award is made annually to the winner of the Students' Contest which includes an oral presentation of research findings accompanied by a manuscript suitable for publication. Mary Beth, a master's candidate from Piqua, Ohio, presented a paper on "Potential Vectors of Bluetongue and Epizootic Hemorrhagic Disease Viruses in Cattle and White-tailed Deer in Alabama." Above she shows her plaque to Dr. Gary Mullen, left, her major professor and Dr. John Pritchett '65, head of the Department of Zoology-Entomology.

tary of the Southeastern Conference. He was a member of the search committee which brought Coach Pat Dye to Auburn and earlier this year became a member of the prestigious NCAA Council for a four-year term.

Early in his introductory press conference, Dr. Bailey conveyed two messages from the Board of Trustees to the Auburn family: First, "The members of the board expressed their deep concern over perceptions they believe are present that the board or the central administration of this institution desires to play favorites in the allocation of resources, favoring one program against another. They have expressed to me their commitment to strive for quality in every program this institution maintains, and in those for which we have adequate resources, the degree of excellence which we are capable of achieving."

The second message from the trustees was their assurance that the search for a new Auburn president "is designed to identify the most capable individual to lead this university on a permanent basis" and will involve all parts of the Auburn family. Dr. Bailey also praised Gov. George Wallace's pledge not to intervene in the presidential choice.

"To be worthy of the name, a university must be a forum for reason and not an arena in which to struggle for power," said Dr. Bailey in elaborating on his philosophy of academic administration. "A university can only be led by the consent of the governed. I don't have any misgivings about running the university. A university can't be 'run.' I will do my best to provide leadership for this institution in the time that is necessary to select a permanent president, but I know that if [my leadership] is going to be effective, it can only be by the consent of the governed. It is going to have to be a team effort. To fail to understand this is to invite abject failure..."

Dr. Bailey defined the role of the central administration at a university as "a support group for those people who are about the main business of the institution—teaching, research, and public service. The central administration can very easily lose sight of this and come to believe that it is an end in itself." He pledged that the business conducted by his administration will be done with the central purpose of the university in mind.

And he stressed the responsibility of "all of us, media representatives especially," in "helping the people of this state to better understand the nature of a university, and what is involved in the leadership of an institution of higher learning."

Dr. Bailey also made it clear that he wants to know what faculty, students, and alumni think. "I cannot function effectively with yes men and women. You can help this institution and you can do me a favor if you tell me what I need to know. I will do my very best to operate with an open door and an open mind. I have a reasonably strong stomach for decisions. It is of utmost importance that an academic administrator operate with compassion. I believe my record speaks for itself. I am a difficult taskmaster. I am demanding of myself and others. I hope I have a reputation for fairness, and I can only refer you to the 1200 or so students I taught during the 25 years I was in the classroom."

A highly-respected parasitologist, Dr. Bailey left the Auburn vice presidency in 1972 to head the Parasitology and Medical Entomology Branch of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases' extramural programs. He returned to campus two years later as a professor in pathology and parasitology, later becoming associate dean for research and graduate studies in the School of Veterinary Medicine in 1979-80.

From 1980 to 1982, Dr. Bailey headed the Regional Parasite Research Laboratory of the USDA at Auburn. He continues to be a professor in the Department of Pathology and Parasitology as well as an adjunct professor in the Department of Comparative Medicine in the College of Medicine and Dentistry at the University of Alabama in Birmingham and a collaborating scientist with the Regional Parasite Research Laboratory.

Interim President Stresses Healing, Academic Quality

A couple of days before he was to draw his first Social Security check, Dr. Wilford S. Bailey '42 assumed the interim presidency of Auburn University. The positive Dr. Bailey, whose 40-year Auburn career includes terms as administrative and academic vice president under President Emeritus Harry M. Philpott, isn't looking back.

"It is of utmost importance that we learn from whatever mistakes have been made in order that they not be repeated," he said in a statement at the Trustees' meeting on February 26 when he was named interim president. "We must profit by these experiences, but our focus must be on the future. As we look forward with confidence and vibrant hope, a clarion call is sent forth for everyone to help develop a meaningful partnership in every phase of activity of this institution. With a deep sense of purpose and with a binding unity, the healing process will be rapid and complete."

The rapidity of that process was emphasized three days later when, on his first day in office, Dr. Bailey defined his role as "healing caretaker"—a role he seemed ideal to fill as he stood comfortably before the news people, administrators, faculty, students, and townspeople and talked about his philosophy and how he would conduct himself as interim president.

He had already sent a memo in the morning mail to all faculty and staff calling on them to demonstrate that "we are united in our determination to make Auburn a university of unequalled academic distinction." He also stressed to the faculty that "we must conduct our affairs with trust and with the kind of tolerance and respect for each other which has historically marked those relationships at Auburn." The day before he had visited each of the department heads who had resigned and asked them to withdraw their resignations, an action he had told the Trustees he would take before he was named interim president, because "each of [the department heads] is a respected scholar and teacher and deeply concerned about this institution."

In setting up his own administrative structure, Dr. Bailey has made minimal changes, which he announced on March 1. Herb White is again head of University Relations and Dan Holensenbeck will fill another, as yet unidentified, position in the university. Dr. Ben Cooper has returned from acting academic vice president to deanship of the School of Pharmacy. Former Academic Vice President Taylor Littleton, who resigned last summer, will be special advisor to the President's Office for academic programs and will be equal opportunity officer for the university while retaining his position as professor of English. The positions of academic and executive vice president will remain vacant until a new president comes in. Peter Henderson, former head of the Air Force ROTC at Auburn 1975-1980 and now a doctoral student in higher education administration, will be Dr. Bailey's "eyes and ears" as administrative assistant. All other university positions will remain the same.

Saying that assuming such a demanding job had not been in his "plans for this month," Dr. Bailey stressed that he would not rehash "the human tragedy that has occurred at this institution in the past months." Calling Dr. Funderburk "a very close personal friend," he made it clear that his own view of responsibility "is to this institution and not to any one individual then, now, or at any time in my career at Auburn."

A former professor of veterinary medicine who has gradually been easing into retirement and whose most recent job was as part-time coordinator of special projects in the Office of the Vice President for Research, Dr. Bailey is chairman of the Auburn Faculty Athletic Committee and secretary of the Auburn Athletic Association.
